ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system is described that captures accurate three-dimensional images of infant heads without the infant being absolutely stationary or fixed in one particular orientation and which automatically produces a cranial remodeling device customized for that particular infant's head to provide appropriate cranial remodeling correction.